TERRANOIA

A collection of 80x1'30" shorts depicting children from over 20 countries around the world, asked to draw their self-portrait. Find out how these kids aged between 4 and 6, who can not yet read nor write, perceive themselves and what world they live in.

In a specially suited studio set in their school, each child starts drawing it's own portrait on a glass pane. A sophisticated camera set up captures the magical moments, edited and encompassed in 80x1'30" short musical vignettes using animated sequences.

A series celebrating the convention on the Rights of the child and a rare glimpse at the universal language of drawing and the boundless imagination of kids.
